

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

Safe Passage is a non-profit organization working to help make the dream of education a reality for the children whose families live and work at the Guatemala City garbage dump.

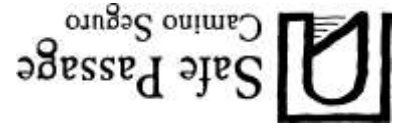

Founded in 1999 by Hanley Denning of Yarmouth, Maine, the program now serves nearly 600 children and their families. These children were accustomed to spending long hours in the dump scavenging for things to sell or eat, but they now have the opportunity to attend school for the first time.

Safe Passage provides public school tuition fees, uniforms, and all books and supplies. The children go to school for half the day and then come to the Safe Passage center where they receive help with their homework, a nutritious meal, and medical and social services, as well as art, music, & sports programs.
